

FAST FACTS:

The Juvenile Rehabilitation Administration (JRA) inmate forecast consists of offenders up to age 21 serving terms of confinement in JRA operated or contracted facilities for criminal offenses committed before the age of 18. The nine youngest inmates on May 31, 2006 were 12 years old.

The 821 offenders in the JRA residential caseload entered in one of three ways:

1. Ninety-one percent were sentenced for a new offense by a juvenile court. These offenders, on release from state custody, are placed on juvenile parole during which time they can be sanctioned with up to 30 days additional confinement for parole violations.
  - Fifty-three percent of the caseload was serving a presumptive “standard range” of confinement based on their crime and criminal history.
  - Thirty-eight percent were sentenced to an exceptional sentence outside the standard range under the “manifest injustice” provision of the juvenile code.
2. Four percent was sanctioned for a violation of juvenile parole
3. Four percent were “under age 18 adult” offenders temporarily transferred from the Department of Corrections until age 18.

The following are characteristics of the 821 offenders in the May 31, 2006 caseload:

Demographics:

Average age:	16.4
% 18 or older:	24.7%
% Male:	90.6%
Race
% Hispanic:	15.7%
% Native American:	5.1%
% Asian:	3.9%
% Other:	2.3%
% White:	52.7%
% African-American:	19.0%
% Unreported:	1.2%

Offender Type:

% Sex offender:	21.4%
% Violent offender:	46.9%
% Prior offenses:	72.7%

Most Serious Commitment Offense:

Sex offense:	18.3%
Assault:	13.8%
Burglary:	14.7%
Robbery:	14.7%

Sentence Type

New Offense
Standard Range:	52.6%
Except Sentence:	38.1%
Detention:	0.4%
Exception to Policy:	0.9%
Parole Revocation:	3.8%
DOC Transfer:	4.3%
From Out of State:	0.0%